Weitere Bewerbungs- informationen/ Information for applicants	We are currently investigating the food metabolome in children cohorts in a multicenter project funded by the German Research Foundation (DFG) and the Agence Nationale de la Recherche (ANR). This international project is coordinated by Dr. Anna Floegel at BIPS and conducted in collaboration with the International Agency for the Research on Cancer (IARC) in Lyon, France and the University of Bonn. With this project we aim to improve dietary exposure assessment in children and adolescents by using high-throughput metabolomics technologies. Thereby, novel dietary biomarkers will be identified and validated based on already collected biosamples and data from large children cohorts, such as the European IDEFICS/I.Family cohort (http://www.ifamilystudy.eu). The successful PhD candidate will support the project with the main efforts in data analysis and interpretation of dietary and metabolomics data. The PhD candidate will be supervised at BIPS in Bremen, but will also have the unique chance to receive additional training at the collaboration sites of the project. We seek an excellent, open-minded and team-spirited PhD candidate. We are looking for a person with a background in epidemiology, nutrition, bioinformatics or related disciplines who is interested in biomarkers, metabolomics and/or childhood nutrition, and who ideally

	has experience with high-dimensional data analysis.
